

NEW YORKISMS.

From Our Own Correspondent. NEW YORK, July 12, 1870. The Late Mr. Lingular. Since so many unfounded reports have found their way into the papers with regard to the late Mr. James W. Lingular, it may not be out of place to mention a few facts in relation to that unhappy man. It was about seventeen years ago when he first began to be successful. On the 18th of July, 1853, he appeared as "Deacon Perry" in Mr. Aiken's adaptation of Uncle Tom's Cabin. In the spring of the succeeding year (1854) he commenced playing "Uncle Tom" in the same play, at Barnum's Old Museum. This character he represented more than one hundred times. He and Mr. G. L. Fox, the comedian and pantomimist, then became associated together in the Old Bowery Theatre, and continued in partnership until ex-District Attorney Whitney (famously known as "Little Bitters") built the New Bowery. When the latter theatre was completed Fox & Lingular dissolved partnership. Fox remained at the Old Bowery and Lingular assumed the management of the New. Here he made all the money that he ever became possessed of, not much, in fact, but sufficient to become the nucleus of a very respectable fortune had he met with ordinary luck in the application of it. His funds never reached a higher sum than $30,000, the largest portion of which was invested in scenery and wardrobe. Unfortunately the theatre was burned. He was not insured, and he lost all excepting a comparatively insignificant sum which he had invested in his wife's name. This misfortune may be said to have been the commencement of his downfall. A number of benefits secured in some small degree to compensate him for his losses, and he passed to the Theatre Comique, of which he became manager. Not very successful there, he opened several drinking saloons, one after another, all of which were more or less failures. To these annoyances were added others of a still more trying and irrefragable nature. I allude to his domestic miseries, which, being domestic, do not require to be lengthily paraded here. Though possessed of a wife and children he was anxious to leave this country, to emigrate to Australia, and there, in his forty-seventh year, commence life anew, and rein in his maturity those theatrical laurels he had worn in his young manhood. This was not to be, however. The friends and managers on whom he had depended for assistance were very reticent in their proffers. This combination of griefs and disappointments found its climax in suicide. On Wednesday night he wrote several letters to friends, bidding them farewell, and it is supposed he immediately proceeded to the foot of Beach street and threw himself into the river. His corpse was found on Thursday morning, but, singular to say, was not recognized until Friday. A coroner's inquest was held on Saturday afternoon, and yesterday afternoon he was buried at Cypress Hills Cemetery. His funeral was attended by hundreds, among whom was at least a score who might have assisted him had they been so minded, and so he staved off the tragedy. But such is life. We ask bread and receive stones; and those who would follow us to the grave rather than lend us their money try to shed tears over the lowered coffin. In similar circumstances to those of poor Lingular, I think one of my dying wishes would be to be spared the satire of having a eulogy pronounced over my tomb by the men who had helped to send me thither.

The District Attorney moved an indictment against Owen J. Starr, J. R. Farnot, counsel for General Starr, held he appeared unexpectedly for Mr. Starr at half an hour's notice. His counsel would be present to-day, but in his absence he had undertaken this case. He would be prepared at two o'clock, and was desirous to proceed. The Judge said the defense could not claim postponement by right. He gave them until two o'clock P. M. Hon. A. J. Parker, Albany, made application on behalf of W. F. Thompson for adjournment until the fall session of the court at Albany, and read an affidavit that he was unprepared to proceed owing to the absence of one Terrence J. Quinn, who sailed for France May 23. The District Attorney said the case had been postponed once. The Judge said he was not satisfied with the affidavit. The following jurors were called in Starr's case:—Robert R. Crowell, Luke Johnson, William Pratt, Lyman G. Lapham, Nelson Ogden, W. D. Barvell, Robert B. Ferguson, James B. Flower, Robert A. Johnson, William Meade, William Thatcher, James Worthington, and Clark Recks, all farmers, with two or three exceptions, and above the average in point of respectability and intelligence. Mr. Farnot questioned them severally as to whether they had read or heard particulars of the raid; they severally replied they had read newspaper reports, but they had left no impression on their minds as to culpability of the prisoners. CONGRESS. House. Continued from the Third Edition. The present year showed a balance of nearly $200,000,000 against the United States, to be paid by bonds. So long as there was no effort to reach gold and silver, and no steps taken in that direction, this and all other policies would fail. The only panacea for the country was a fair, gradual, honest resumption of specie payments, and God, the laws of trade, commerce, and democracy would fight thereafter for it. The report was also approved by Messrs. Marshall, Niblack, Garfield, Benjamin, and Morgan. Mr. Garfield regarded the seventh section, which requires new national banks to deposit the new bonds, as an indefinite suspension of the banking feature of the late currency bill. He also opposed the allowance of one-half of one per cent. commission, thinking one-quarter of one per cent. ample. He wished the report recommitted.
